10. The 2021 Mazda CX-30 Is The Perfect Budget Crossover

The 2021 Mazda CX-30 is a fairly average-priced vehicle, with the base trim starting at $22,050. Front-wheel-drive is the standard, so if you want your Mazda CX-30 to have AWD, you will have to shell out $1,400 more.

More trims climb up in price, starting at $24,050 and maxing out at $34,050, which is the Mazda CX-30 Turbo Premium Plus.

9. The Mazda CX-30 Bears More Power

While the CX-30 was launched in 2020, there have been several changes made in the 2021 model. The main addition being an optional turbocharged engine that can now make 250 horses. On a car this size, it's punchy power.

Android Auto and Apple Car Play were made standard, while the Preferred Trim got a moon roof. Satellite radio is offered on the Premium model.

8. There Is Plenty Space Inside This Best Budget Crossover

The inside space of the Mazda CX-30 is above average, and it seats five people comfortably. The cabin upfront feels airy and most adult passengers will find the headroom and legroom comfortable.

When it comes to cargo, the low lift-in height works to the CX-was room for more progress, and these results confirm that," IIHS President David Harkey says. "The good rating for the CX-5 shows that robust protection in a more severe side crash is achievable."

Nine vehicles — the 2021 Audi Q3, Buick Encore, Chevrolet Trax, Honda CR-V, Nissan Rogue, Subaru Forester, Toyota RAV4, Toyota Venza and Volvo XC40 — earned "acceptable" ratings from IIHS.

Eight others — the Chevrolet Equinox, Ford Escape, GMC Terrain, Hyundai Tucson, Jeep Compass, Jeep Renegade, Kia Sportage and Lincoln Corsair — earned "marginal" ratings.

The 2021 Honda HR-V and 2020 Mitsubishi Eclipse earned "poor" ratings.

IIHS won't start using the new test in its evaluations until 2023, but released this data to give automakers time to reengineer their cars to meet it if they want a chance to earn the coveted Top Safety Pick or Top Safety Pick+ designation when it goes into effect.

30's advantage, as does the wide hatch opening. Plus the 20.2 cubic feet of cargo space adds to the many reasons why the CX-30 is best.

7. A Budget Crossover With Luxury Inside

All cars now boast a touch-screen

again in customer ownership experience with the introduction of Hino Edge, the company's all-new, third generation connected vehicle solution. Hino Edge synergizes the digital connection between the fleet customer, dealer network, Telematics Service Providers (TSP's), and Hino Ultimate Support Center, to provide customers a competitive edge. This powerful solution replaces Hino Insight and is included on qualifying 22MY and newer Hino conventional trucks as standard equipment.

Hino customers will receive five years of complimentary access to Edge's fleet management web portal and mobile hub app named Hino Ultimate. The fully integrated connectivity ecosystem delivers vehicle location tracking, a live fleet performance dashboard, vehicle health monitoring including real time fault notifications with severity ratings, simplified service experience with case communication, and the flexibility to add-on a third party advanced telematics service from one of Hino Trucks preferred partners.

Dominik Beckman, Director of Marketing, Dealer Operations, and Connected Vehicle shared, "The enhanced suite of capabilities from Hino Edge and the wealth of assistance it provides are key advantages to our customers through unmatched operational efficiencies. Then there is the new addition of the Hino Ultimate app, putting infotainment system, and so the Mazda CX-30 crossover is no different. Or is it? Instead of just another touch-screen, the CX-30 has a rotary controller on the center console, something many luxury cars have as an upmarket move.

Many auto reviewers say that not only is it ergonomic and easy to operate, it's also less distracting than a touch screen.

6. The 2021 Mazda CX-30 Is Fuel Savvy

One of the reasons why the Mazda CX-30 is a pleasure to drive is that six-speed automatic transmission, that always manages to be in the right gear, and makes the most of engine power. In turn, the Mazda CX-30 is more fuel efficient.

EPA estimates that the Mazda CX-30 front-wheel drive gets 25 MPG in the city and a cool 33 MPG on the highway. On the AWD, it's 24 MPG city and 31 MPG on the highway. The fuel economy adds to its status as 2021's best budget crossover.

5. For A Budget Crossover, The Mazda CX-30 Rides Superb

While the Mazda CX-30 is positioned as a small family car, or a daily driver, its

It's only the Turbo trim that comes with the 250-horsepower turbocharged engine and standard AWD. While the base model offers good value, the CX-30 Select will add blind-spot monitoring and dual-zone climate control, with better upholstery, all for $2,000.

1. This Is The Best Budget Crossover

So why are we calling the 2021 Mazda CX-30 the best budget crossover? Because it offers value for money, with roomy interiors and a peppy drive at an affordable price. While it's a daily driver or a small family car for the urban dweller, Mazda has tried to keep the drive as fun as possible, keeping the brand ethos in mind.

It's a safe and reliable car, and comes with enough plush and creature comforts to appeal to anyone who likes his car modern. And when it comes to the competition, the Mazda CX-30 usually has the upper hand. So there's little not to like about this budget crossover.

as technology advances and the demands on connectivity continues to increase.

"Looking to the future, Hino Edge opens up incredible synergy opportunities through on- and off vehicle partner integrations with the potential to transform customer ownership experience in ways unimaginable today," concluded Beckman.
